

"The First Emperor of China" videodisc is the first part of PROJECT EMPEROR-I, funded by the Humanities Project in Libraries, the National Endowment for the Humanities, with a matching grant from Simmons College and a hardware grant from Digital Equipment Corporation.

The project applies the latest in videodisc technology in order to present and interpret a major historical/archaeological period of China's past. The First Emperor, Qin Shi Huang Di's terracotta army stands guard over his tomb in Xian, China. This army and other cultural aspects captured on the disc make that period of Chinese history (221-206 B.C.) come alive for the general public.

Dr. Chen's program will demonstrate the interactive videodisc and present background on the production and applications as well as the research decisions and challenges leading to its existence.

SPONSORS: Joining the SMU Library Automation Program in sponsoring Dr. Chen's presentation are the following campus organizations:
Bridwell Library, Business Information Center, Central University Libraries, Dedman College (The School of Humanities and Sciences), DeGolyer Library, Friends of the SMU Libraries/Colophon, International Office, Meadows Computer Laboratory, Meadows Museum, Meadows School of the Arts (Slide Library), Media Services, Office of the Provost, Organization of International Students, and Underwood Law Library.

Facilities and technical support from the Edwin L. Cox School of Business, Central University Libraries' Music Library, Media Services, Meadows Computer Laboratory, and Texas Video Systems. Reception sponsored by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce in Dallas, in collaboration with the AMIGOS Bibliographic Council, Inc.

Cover design by Jae Song Shim, SMU Publications Services, based on photography from Project Emperor I.

Southern Methodist University and its

Library Automation Program

cordially invite you to

PROJECT EMPEROR I:
A Demonstration/Lecture of the Interactive Videodisc

by

Dr. Ching-Chih Chen
Principal Investigator and Project Director
Graduate School of Library and Information Science
Simmons College

Thursday, January 14, 1988

8 p.m.

The Georges Auditorium
Crow Building 175
Edwin L. Cox School of Business

Reception Follows